International experts demand an immediately suspension of COVID-19 modified mRNA vaccines.

On 25th November an international group of politicians and leading medical and other professionals wrote to the heads of state of 10 European countries (Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Greenland, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Sweden, and the United Kingdom) calling for a suspension of modified mRNA vaccines citing serious health concerns.

- Science has shown it was a lottery as to which batch a person received and the side effects – including death - they experienced.
- Vaccines were never tested for their ability to block transmission. Medical product regulators, as well as government agencies, misled the public when coercing them into accepting the products.
- Multiple independent analyses show that modified mRNA vaccines contain variable but alarmingly high levels of residual DNA. This raises extreme concerns about the risks to human health and the potential for genetic damage that were not accounted for scientifically in the authorization process.

The call has unprecedented international support and demands:

- An immediate halt to the use of modified mRNA vaccines.
- An independent and transparent investigation into their approval and use.
- Scientific evidence that shows that there is no risk of damage to human DNA.
