Case Study:

AMERICANS UNITED FOR CHANGE “BUSH LEGACY” BUS

Americans United for Change

2007-2008

PROJECT: Create a traveling museum of the Bush Administration’s Failures that would garner local and national press attention to the members of Congress that voted in lock-step with his policies.

AUDIENCE: Local and national media outlets throughout the country

CHALLENGE: In the Fall of 2007 Americans United for Change approached The Markham Group to outfit a bus chronicling the shortfalls of the Bush Presidency. Through a series of interactive exhibits, this mobile museum would draw public attention to President Bush and the members of Congress that have supported his failed policies.

Thus was launched The Bush Legacy Project, a 5 month million-dollar museum on wheels that will hit over 150 cities by the November 2008 election, and has garnered significant public and media attention everywhere it has been.

The bus covers 8 subjects: Iraq, Katrina, Economy, State of the American Worker, Healthcare, Education, Environment and a Make Progress section with the addition of a timeline of the entire Bush Presidency on the floor. It is equipped with 8 computers, 5 flat screen televisions internally and 2 externally, a full PA system for outdoor events, 40 running feet of printed awning and several interactive exhibits. One of the highlights of the tour is an antique gas pump that has been retrofitted with a touchscreen allowing visitors to see the increase in their annual gas costs as compared to eight years ago.
